RSVP of Central Oklahoma Announces New Board Members

OKLAHOMA CITY-- Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Central Oklahoma, a nonprofit organization that enriches the lives of senior adults through community volunteer opportunities and the Provide-A-Ride Senior Transportation Program, named two new members to its Board of Directors. The new board members are Debbie Evers and Francellies Otero.

“Because of our passionate senior volunteers and our board of directors and advisory council, RSVP is recognized as a sound, strong, and vital program that helps to make our community a better place,” said Beth Patterson, RSVP’s executive director.

Debbie Evers’ career has been senior-focused for more than a decade, serving in marketing and executive leadership for senior living centers. She currently serves as the executive director of Quail Creek Senior Living. She is a member of the Edmond Women’s Club and the Alzheimer’s Association.

Francellies Otero is the vice president of membership and events for the Greater OKC Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, an organization she’s been associated with for more than 10 years. Otero has also has experience in sales, hospitality, and television, including the Hispanic television stations Telemundo and Univision.

The new members are welcomed by current board of directors, Tara Bradley, retired ONG; Kristin Davis, Sonic Corporation director of communications; Kim McAllister, owner, Sooner Calligraphy; Board President Kathleen O’Toole, executive and project management consultant; Wanda Patrick, retired, Hank Martin, CPA; and Blair Wigington, Love’s Travel Stops & Country Stores corporate legal counsel.

About RSVP of Central Oklahoma:

Since 1973, RSVP of Central Oklahoma has helped senior adults continue to live with purpose and meaning by connecting them with rewarding community volunteer opportunities, including RSVP’s Provide-A-Ride Senior Transportation Program. RSVP is a partner of Senior Corps and the United Way of Central Oklahoma. To learn more about becoming a volunteer, call Laura McPheeters at 405.605.3110 or visit rsvpokc.org.
